

ACADEMY REPORTER

And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. Romans 8:28

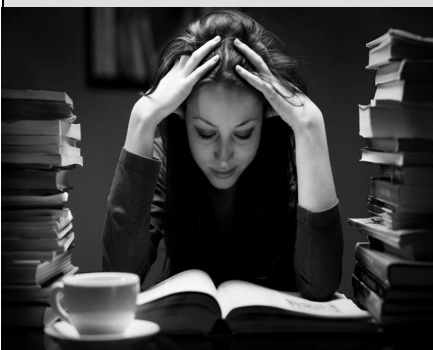

There are times when all of us seem to be bombarded by the circumstances of life. Sometimes it is a traumatic situation, the break up of a relationship, the loss of a loved one, or betrayal by a close friend. Other times it is just the accumulation and buildup of day-to-day living, continual interruptions in your day, frustrating people with whom you must deal, or just too many responsibilities and no way to complete them.

The ways we deal with these pressures impact those around us and can very easily affect our Christian witness. It is easy to unleash our frustrations on innocent bystanders. Our spouse or children, colleagues, or even God Himself become the target of our pent-up feelings. In contrast, when we are able to remain calm in the midst of difficult circumstances, we are a walking testimony illustrating God's power.

How can I better allow God to help me in this way? Recognize that everything that comes your way must first come through the hand of a loving, Heavenly Father. While He does not send every circumstance, He does allow it. Learn to anticipate the results of your decisions and actions. Is your load heavier simply because you took on more than you should have? Do your best and allow

God to work through it. We are responsible for our effort not the result. Finally, learn to let God take care of the things you do not understand. He is trustworthy, and He can work even when we are not worried!
